The world's all right; only the chaps who want the world are grumbling.

No one has as yet suggested that the sending of Admiral Evans' fleet to the Pacific has had anything to do with Great Britain's determination to build a larger fighting vessel.

There are evidences that Kentucky is becoming civilized. Six members of one family have been killed recently and no family feud existed and on top of that a sheriff prevented the lynching of two negroes.

The somewhat caustic criticism of the school examiners appearing as an editorial in the Star of Saturday evening is somewhat belated, as the manuscripts in question had been some time before that transmitted to the State Commissioner of Common Schools.

Great Britain is said to be preparing to beat her own record in the size of battleships, and Americans are going to eclipse Great Britain. Why not wait until John Bull has built the biggest ship he can build and then we can show him what a big ship is.

WE TOLD YOU SO.

I thus been reiterated in these columns for the past year or two that no tariff revision is possible by the Republican majority in the next Congress. The trusts and monopolists have too firm a hold on the Republican leaders. This is now confirmed from Oyster Bay by Senator Hopkins after a consultation with President Roosevelt, which was participated in by H. H. Miles, representing the Wisconsin Tariff Revision League. Senator Hopkins on leaving Oyster Bay said: "The conclusion reached was that no tariff revision should be undertaken until after the next presidential election. It would be suicidal to the Republican party," the Senator added. "To undertake a revision of the tariff during the next Congress. After the presidential election I believe it will be the duty of the Republican party to revise the tariff and that it will be done."

After! after! always after! or later, or next year, but never now. The last Republican national platform declared: "We insist upon the maintenance of the principle of protection" and the next platform will contain a similar declaration or the Republican leaders would find themselves without their usual contributions for their campaign funds from the protected trusts and monopolists.

Will those Republicans who feel that trust high prices are plundering them, be satisfied with the standpatters' program? From experience they know that with two or three exceptions every Republican representative in Congress will fall back upon the Republican platform, which "insists upon the maintenance of the principle of protection"—that is, the protection of the trusts, and vote against tariff revision.

What does the conclusion reached by the President and Senator Hopkins mean; that: "It would be suicidal to the Republican party to undertake a revision of the tariff during the next Congress?"

It must be one of three things, either the Republicans cannot get along in 1908 without the usual campaign contributions from the protected trusts; or that the present trust prosperity would be dissipated by reducing some of the protection the trusts now enjoy; or to revise the tariff would cause a split in the Republican ranks.

If Republican prosperity is dependent upon protecting the trusts in making enormous profits, those who are paying trust high prices, and are not too partisan to help their own pockets, must come to the conclusion that the Republican leaders are in league with the trusts to plunder them.

STANDARD FAVORS ITS FOREIGN TRADE

Commissioner Smith Complains That the Oil Trust Has Not Only Raised Prices in This Country but at the Same Time Has Been Making Reductions in the Foreign Field.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 12.—That the Standard Oil company fosters its export trade at the expense of the American consumer is the declaration made by Herbert C. Smith, commissioner of corporations in his letter transmitting to the president the second part of his report covering investigations of discriminations in prices in the petroleum industry. Data collected shows, the commissioner says, that a recent years American prices have gone up, while foreign prices have gone down, margins on home business being from 1-2 to 3 times as high as on foreign business. Excuses made by the Standard for the apparent discrimination in prices in favor of the foreign consumer are declared to be without any foundation.

Discriminations in prices in the domestic market are said to be even more extraordinary, prices in the United States being determined by the extent of the monopoly which the Standard enjoys at a given place. Thus a wide range exists in prices charged for the same products in different localities. Commissioner Smith declares prices right have been reduced to consumers had the Standard been content with reasonable profits, but it is "pocketed all the advantages of its economies instead of sharing them with the public." The commissioner's letter to the president in part follows:

"In the business of selling petroleum products in foreign countries the price policy at the Standard Oil company has apparently been to sacrifice the interests of the American consumer for the purpose of securing the Standard's foreign business, which is a very important one. In 1904 over 55 per cent of the kerosene oil produced in the country was exported of which the Standard exported about 87 per cent.

"The relative movement of oil prices as distinguished from their absolute level has shown for the last eight years a startling disparity between the United States and foreign markets, particularly from 1902 to 1905. The American price steadily advanced from 1897 to 1903. The New York export price advanced much less up to 1903, declining in 1904, and the Hamburg (German) price shows practically the same movement as the New York export price, while the London price shows a steady decline from 1901 to 1904 and a very important drop during 1905.

The course of American and foreign prices in the last five years covered by this report has shown a greatly increased divergence, in general the American prices going up and the foreign prices showing a marked decline.

Still more remarkable is the comparison of the absolute level of prices (as distinguished from their movement) of the United States and foreign markets. The statistics obtained for these computations were secured by a representative of the bureau who visited the more important European oil-consuming countries and secured accurate and representative data.

Where Carp Thrive Wonderfully.

Three years ago the government stocked the Verdigris river with red carp as an experiment. The fish have grown, and now in this section of the river it appears that there are very few fish of any other kind. One fisherman caught 600 pounds in a net the other night, and all were carp except about half a dozen.

The fish, which were very small when put into the stream, now range in size from two to six pounds, and a few have been caught that weighed 12 pounds. The carp have grown better in the Verdigris than in any other stream stocked by the government.

The Verdigris is a muddy stream. The Arkansas river has too much alkali in it, and the average mountain stream of the territory is too clear and cold for carp.

SIMPLE LIFE IN PALACE.

Brother of C. M. Schwab to Spend Honeymoon in $5,000,000 Mansion.

New York.—The 18-year-old bride of Prof. Edward H. Schwab, brother of Charles M. Schwab, said just after her marriage: "We won't travel in my brother-in-law's private car, because it will not be in keeping with our future life. It will be the simple life we will lead."

The young professor, who is only 23—and the girl, who first met while she was studying at Notre Dame, will begin their "simple life" in one of the most gorgeous palaces in New York, a magnificent French mansion with gardens, huge wrought iron railings, locked gates and army of servants, which the steel magnate built on Riverside drive.

The bridegroom's brother has turned the $5,000,000 house over to them for their exclusive use during their honeymoon.

The private rooms of the professor and his bride, on the second floor, are decorated with the painting "Awakening of Cupid." Behind each bedroom is a Louis XVI dressing room, such as the bride never dreamed of in planning her "simple life." The ceiling of the bride's dressing room is decorated with "The Toilet of Cupid."

When they breakfast vis-a-vis in this $5,000,000 haven for simple life honeymooners, they will gaze upon specially woven tapestries representing "Diana Preparing for the Hunt," and the service, all of which is especially designed in keeping with the French period, will give them the quintessence of simplicity.

While only two blocks from the whirling subway, the Schwab home, like the chateaux of Azaay Rideau, Blois and Chinon, from which different parts were taken, is as isolated as though a feudal lord's archers waited to keep intruders at bay.

The amusements of the young people may be varied without stirring out of doors, for if they like swimming there is the magnificent natatorium and gymnasium, and if they like billiards, there is the billiard room. It is understood that the bride and bridegroom will occupy the mansion for two months, and then will return to South Bend, Ind.

FOR SPAIN'S ROYAL INFANT.
Sumptuous Perambulator in Which His Highness Will Ride.

London.—Her Majesty, Queen Victoria of Spain, sometime ago ordered a perambulator for the new heir of the Spanish throne of a well known English manufacturer. The carriage was completed and, after being placed on private view for a short time, was shipped to Madrid, where it now awaits its use by the royal child.

The perambulator is a sumptuous affair, and yet is no wise showy. It is entirely in white and the middle panel on each side carries the royal Spanish coat of arms. The hood of white patent leather at the head of the carriage is supplemented by a silk shade extending the full length. This shade is trimmed with the very finest of lace, especially sent on from Madrid by Queen Victoria for that purpose.

The body of the carriage is suspended from two sets of springs by means of straps, insuring an unusually easy motion. The wheels are rubber tired and ball bearing. The body is upholstered in white satin, quilted over the very softest of down.

Hall Now Fully Equipped.
The last machinery has been placed in Hammond hall, the new Yale metallurgical laboratory. The laboratory was presented to Yale two years ago by John Hays Hammond, the former South African mining engineer. He is now head of the department of mining engineering at Yale. The Sheffield scientific school now has the only complete concentrating plant of its kind in the country.
